ROOSEVELT EXTENDS A UTOPIA FOR 3 MONTHS AND PLANS EXTENSIVE TO STABILIZE EMPLOYMENT

COMPANION HURT, SENT TO HOSPITAL

Camp Headquarters Orders
Probe Into Accident, Which Slightly Injured Truck Driver.

RUFORD, Ga., Nov. 2.—Trapped in her sedan, which overturned and caught fire after colliding with a CCC truck near here tonight, Mrs. Prince L. Royal, wife of the superintendent of the Bona Allen plant, and one of the most prominent women in Buford, was burned to death before she could be extricated from the wreckage.

Mrs. Royal's companion, Mrs. R. J. Ramsey, also of Buford, narrowly escaped from the burning car. She was carried to a Gainesville hospital, where it was said that her condition, while painful, was not regarded as serious and that she would be able to return home in a day or two.

The driver of the truck, said to be Johnnie Holston, about 35 years old, a member of CCC Camp F-11, near Dahlgren, was given first-aid treatment at Gainesville. Holston's companion on the truck, whose name was not learned, also said to be a member of the Dahlgren camp, was not hurt.

The accident occurred at 7:30 o'clock tonight, three miles east of Buford in Hall county on the Atlanta-Gainesville highway. The truck was going east and the Royal car was traveling west. The truck was on route back to the Dahlgren camp after having been to Atlanta for supplies.

Officers tonight had not determined the cause of the accident, which is said to have occurred on a comparatively level stretch of the road.

As the truck and automobile collided, the car overturned, landing on the left side and instantly burst into flames. Mrs. Ramsey was able to extricate herself, with slight burns and other injuries. Mrs. Royal, apparently pinned under the steering wheel, was unable to get out of the blazing car, and before enough help arrived to extinguish the fire, she was burned to death.

Among the motorists to arrive at the scene of the wreck soon after it happened was Lieutenant Robert P. McKinnon, stationed at CCC Camp F-19, near Highlands, N. C., who reported the accident to CCC camp headquarters at Fort McPherson, where it was said tonight the accident would be probed.

Mrs. Royal's body was brought to Buford. She is survived by her husband, four children, Mrs. Harold Hayes, of Buford; Victor Royal, Prince L. Royal Jr., and Lucille Royal; two brothers, W. A. Plummer, of

CHEST CAMPAIGN FORMALLY ENDS; $320,264 RAISED

Workers Praised for Achievements; Solicitation To Continue Until $400,000 Is Raised.

With workers entitled to what Campaign Chairman Herman L. Turner termed "a sense of achievement," Atlanta's twelfth annual campaign for "Community Chest" funds was closed formally Friday night with subscriptions of $320,264 pledged toward the $400,000 goal.

Although the army of 2,500 volunteers was officially disbanded with the tabulation of final reports at a dinner meeting at the Athletic Club, solicitation by the groups division will be continued until the entire $400,000 needed shall have been pledged.

Robert F. Maddox, president of the Chest, congratulating and thanking both workers and contributors, expressed confidence that Atlantans "knowing that the agencies must have additional funds in order to carry on their welfare and character building programs efficiently," soon will subscribe the rest of the money required.

Final tabulations Friday night showed the following:

400 Workers Gather.
The final meeting, by far the largest yet held, brought together approximately 400 workers. Cheering reports as team after team passed its quota.

PLANS TO PURCHASE KNOXVILLE UTILITY DROPPED BY TVA

Lilienthal Abandons Negotiation in Face of Litigation, Despite Mass Meeting Backing Deal.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 2.—(AP) The Tennessee Valley Authority's long negotiations to acquire properties of the Tennessee Public Service Company in and near Knoxville were terminated at an end today by David E. Lilienthal, the authority's power director.

He declared that "failure of the transaction was due to any difference between the parties as to price of fairness to investors," and made clear that the authority "is not negotiating further for acquisition of the properties."

Sale of the local utility's distribution system in Knoxville and near-by communities to the TVA was halted this week by Judge E. K. Longford of Nashville, who ruled that a court should review proceedings held before the state utilities commission, which had approved the sale. A restraining order was granted on the petition of 13 ice and coal companies.

The TVA proposed to pay $6,191,000 for the properties, using them to furnish Muscle Shoals power to Knoxville and aid the authority in its yardstick program in determining the relative cost of public and private distribution of power.

Lilienthal's statement today followed a mass meeting last night at which City Councilman W. A. Cockrum asserted that negotiations have been started "to see if it is possible to continue the deal" whereby the TVA would acquire the local company's system.

Councilman W. N. Smithson, another speaker, said Lilienthal "told our power committee that President Roosevelt had instructed him to raise the price so all stockholders of the Tennessee Public Service Company would get their money back." He later explained he was referring to the deal in its early stages.

Claim Denied.
Lilienthal answered today that there "was no basis whatever for the statement attributed to him by the 'New York Times' and the 'New York Herald Tribune'." He added that "I never quote the president except with his express authorization and direction."

Savannah Turned Over To Atlanta Motorcade

By RALPH T. JONES,
Staff Correspondent.
SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 2.—The "Four Capitals" motorcade today took over the city of Savannah. From early morning hours, when the Atlanta Police band and the Atlanta Fireman's band, aided and abetted by companion organizations from Savannah police and fire departments, began street ceremonies outside the city, Savannahans outdid themselves in entertaining the visitors. Highway dedicated.

Mayor Key in his talk said, like the early Georgia colonists who fought 200 years ago for the preservation of the things they held dear, and then by sacrifice, thrift, energy and determination created the empire state, "so must we today."

"We in the cities know that when the ragged grows on the farms of Georgia, the grass will grow in our streets, and so we are inseparably tied to the country people. We have got to work hard, to be thrifty. This duty business is going to peter out soon, and then we must all make our own way."

CIVIL SERVICE BAR GRAND JURY FREES MRS. PETERSON 4 HELD AS 'REDS'

Woman Will Be Ineligible for Post Under Regulations Are Upset.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—The lack of a civil service status today loomed as a barrier to Mrs. V. Peterson, who has been recommended by Congressman Robert Ramsey to be assistant postmaster of Atlanta when the appointment of Acting Postmaster Lon Livingston becomes permanent.

Postmaster-General James A. Frazier, who is in Savannah Friday night, said in Savannah Friday night that he was fully aware of the civil service matter governing the assistant postmaster. He acknowledged that it was usual to appoint an out-

GRAND JURY ASKS SCHOOL MERGER, BOND REPEAL

Consolidation of City,
County Systems Urged.
Racketeering in Fulton
County Is Assailed.

Calling for a unification of the Fulton county and city of Atlanta school systems, as had been forecast, the Fulton county grand jury in present sessions returned Friday also asked for repeal of the state's bond-dry law and the substitution thereof of a system of local option to follow the legalization of the sale of light wines and beer.

In addition, the presentments call upon the county to end racketeering, especially the lottery game, and the "take claim menace," pointing out the need for two superior court judges sitting on criminal cases at all times and asking that violators of the lottery laws be given straight chain gang sentences in an effort to curb these violations.

Communicative activities were scored as a legislative enactment for repeal of laws on that subject was called for.

The grand jury also suggested a uniform narcotic law for the state and advocated the repeal of the bond-dry law with the local option on the liquor question and state-wide legalization of light wines and beer.

Looking to improvement in the educational standards of the county, the grand jury recommends consolidation of the county and city of Atlanta school systems.

Drivers' License Urged.
Calling attention to the alarming toll of human life being caused by automobile accidents by the unrestricted issue of the highspeed by reckless motorists, a state-wide law requiring drivers' examinations and licenses is recommended.

While commending city and county officials for their efforts to curb crime in the area, the grand jury points out that there has been no diminution in the number of serious offenses.

Referring to the lottery racket it is set forth that "some of our so-called better citizens do not hesitate to indulge in this illegal traffic which they should lend every effort to suppress."

In Hands of Racketeers.
Quoting from the presentments: "It is needless to say that this racket is in the hands of notorious racketeers whose lives have been devoted to criminal activities and who on account of the enormous profits are rapidly becoming overlords of the underworld of the county."

CRIPPLE, 76, KILLED; THREE WOUNDED IN PISTOL AFFRAY

James Lindsay Slain by George Gentry, 43, Who
Is Felled by Policeman;
Woman Near Death.

An elderly crippled man was instantly killed, a man and a woman critically wounded and a policeman seriously wounded in a shooting affray which took place late Friday night at 466 Jones avenue.

The dead man, James Lindsay, a 76-year-old cripple, was seated in a wheel chair when he was fatally shot twice by George Gentry, 43, after Gentry had fired a shot which wounded the housekeeper at the home and creased Patrolman R. E. Floyd's head.

Both men lived at the Jones avenue address.

Neighbors, hearing unusual commotion in the house at 466 Jones avenue, summoned police. Radio Patrolmen Floyd and George Lee responded.

Lee took his post at the rear of the home and Floyd knuckled on the front door, which was opened by Miss May Newberry, 35, housekeeper for Lindsay and Gentry.

"Shut that door and don't let them in," Gentry, according to police reports, it said to have ordered Miss Newberry. When she didn't respond to his commands, according to police, he fired a shot which struck Miss Newberry in the left breast, passed through her body and creased Patrolman Floyd's left temple.

Temporarily stunned, Patrolman Floyd fell against the door jamb. Gentry, according to police reports, then ran out into a rear room of the house, where the aged Lindsay was sitting in his wheelchair. Without a word Gentry fired two shots at the cripple, who doubled forward in the wheelchair dead.

Then, according to police reports, Gentry, the smoking pistol in his hand, came back to the front of the house, where he met Patrolman Floyd, who had partially recovered from the shock.

Gentry, according to Patrolman Floyd's version, squared off and fired three times at the policeman, who returned the fire. Floyd escaped unscathed, but Gentry dropped to the floor with bullet wounds in his right forehead and in his shoulder.

Gentry and Miss Newberry were taken to Grady hospital, where they Saturday morning attendants held out little hope for their recovery.

STEP IS REGARDED AS MAJOR REBUFF TO UNION LABOR

Attempts To Impose 30-
Hour Week and Remove
"Merit" Clause Balked
by Issuance of Order
Without Hearings.

INDUSTRY RALLIES TO BATTLE UNIONS

Inquiry Will Be Started at Once on Means To Insure Adequate Yearly Income for Workers.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—(UP) Organized labor suffered its first major rebuff under the New Deal tonight when President Roosevelt extended the code for the automobile industry without change until February 1, 1935.

At the same time, the chief executive said he would order a study of wages and hours in the industry looking toward stabilization of employment and adequate yearly earnings for the workers.

Mr. Roosevelt's action climaxed a bitter struggle between trade unionists and the automobile manufacturers that began when former NRA Administrator Hugh S. Johnson approved the so-called "merit" clause in the industry's code.

Unions Balked.
This provision gave the employers the right to hire and fire workers without regard to their union affiliations. It was an effective barrier to unionization of automobile workers and labor chiefs have fought vigorously but vainly to dynamite it out of the code.

In extending the code without a public hearing or revision, Mr. Roosevelt also prevented labor leaders from attempting to impose a 30-hour week on the industry. The president said in making known his action that the code was "a compromise between the industry and the labor union."

The proposed study in the industry, Mr. Roosevelt stated, would be made at once. He said he would call in representatives of the industry and of labor soon after he returns from New York. The survey, he said, is being made under his executive powers.

Makers Not Consulted.
"I have not asked the manufacturers to agree that such an inquiry should be made," the president continued. "The manufacturers have cooperated in supporting the administration's program in the past, and I am confident that they will cooperate with the administration in this way in serving the purposes of recovery and will consider with an open mind any practical suggestions that may arise out of the inquiry."

"And the president continued, 'I am also confident that in this I shall have the interest and co-operation of labor.'"

War on Unions.
The code action by the chief executive came shortly after industry had fired its first guns in a battle directed at curbing the spread of organized labor's powers throughout the nation.

The war opened on the National Association of Manufacturers prepared to ask all state legislatures to enact laws "fixing the legal responsibility of labor organizations for their acts."

In Baltimore, Md., George A. Sloan, head of the Cotton Textile Institute, issued an ultimatum to the state to which the American Federation of Labor is wedded. He warned a group of business leaders that im-

Declaring, somewhat to the surprise of a packed press conference, that it would be amazing to know how often he had voted for individual republicans, the chief executive plainly made a bid for disregard of party lines in choosing candidates.

The chief executive issued his appeal for the re-election of Governor Lehman, of New York, was made today by President Roosevelt, but smilingly he declined to pledge himself straight down the line on the democratic ticket.

Smiling, the chief executive replied it would be amazing to know how often he had voted for individual republicans. He did not amplify this statement.

Then, immediately sprang up two schools of interpretation of his meaning. One speculated that his failure to mention Copeland meant that the president might not get the presidential vote.

The other pointed out that the chief executive had taken no open part in any other state contests and merely was making an exception in the case of Lehman, who was his assistant when he himself was governor of the Empire State. In this same school was another thought that had Mr. Roosevelt mentioned Copeland in

Two more Atlanta lawyers and two negroes were named in indictments returned Friday by the Fulton grand jury on the closing day of its sessions, during which it conducted an investigation of an alleged widespread scheme to defraud business firms through fraudulent personal injury claims.

The attorneys named are C. C. Hornbuckle and Norman DeKramer, who are charged with cheating and swindling. Luther Lowe and John Allen, negroes, are charged with swindling. Bonds for the attorneys were fixed at $10,000.

DeKramer immediately appeared with a bondsman who signed for his appearance. Hornbuckle was allowed to sign his own bond. DeKramer filed a demand for trial which means that his case must be tried before the expiration of two terms of court, or he will be automatically acquitted of the charge.

DeKramer is charged with conspiring with Sam Worthing to defraud the Georgia Power Company of $1,500 and with representing that Worthing was John Gilbert and that Gilbert had been in "red" when thrown from a street car, which representations are alleged to be untrue.

In another count DeKramer is charged with conspiring with T. M. Worthing and Sam Worthing and Thomas E. Scott to defraud Georgia Power Company of $750, representing that John Jagers had been injured when thrown from a car. It is further charged that $150 was accepted in settlement of the claim.

The bill against Hornbuckle charges that he conspired with Sam Worthing to defraud Southern Grocery Stores, Inc., of $250, representing that Sam Worthing, who gave the name of D. S. Worthing, was struck by the car and injured, which representation, it is alleged, was untrue.

It is alleged that the company paid $100 in settlement of the claim.

Luther Lowe is charged with swindling in falsely under the name of F. S. Starks in an affidavit relative to a claim against Georgia Power Company. John Allen is charged with false swearing relative to a claim of Minnie Brooks against Paradies & Rich.

NEW SHIPS NEEDED BY U. S., SAYS SPEAKER

Foreign Trade Standing Threatened, Propeller Club Is Told.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 2.—(P)—A warning that the United States must provide for a definite program to replace ships that "are rapidly becoming obsolete" if American shipping is to hold its own in foreign trade was sounded today by H. Gerish Smith, president of the National Council of American Shipbuilders, New York.

In a speech presented before the eighth annual convention of the Propeller Club of the United States, Smith declared that the United States is behind every other principal maritime nation in the percentage of its merchant fleet represented by modern tonnage. Only 11.6 per cent of the United States fleet has been built within the last ten years, while from 31 to 45 per cent of the fleets of other nations have been built during that period.

In the absence of further new construction, Smith added, "nearly 90 per cent of our foreign tonnage will be obsolete by 1940."

He referred to the investigations by congress of mail contracts awarded under the merchant marine act of 1928, the recommendations of the department of commerce for modifications of the act, and the pending legislation now pending in congress and the investigation of ocean mail contracts, declaring, "The need for an adequate merchant marine is clouded with uncertainty."

"A prompt clarification of shipping problems and the adoption of a permanent policy," Smith added, "will improve the morale within the industry and encourage renewed efforts to establish American shipping upon a sound and stable basis."

Brisk Competition.
He pointed to brisk competition in the foreign field and declared that "a merchant marine will not permanently endure unless its vessels are kept up to date by the periodic addition of new vessels of the latest design and of the highest efficiency and enabled them to compete successfully with the vessels of other nations."

Citing a variety of figures and tables, Smith continued, "The value of our total water-borne foreign trade was never less than $3,700,000,000 during the years 1923 to 1931, inclusive. It would seem that the conservative figure for measuring our future requirements would be $3,500,000,000 a year for water-borne trade, with one-third of it carried on American vessels. During the period he cited he said this country carried from 33 to 36 per cent by value of its trade in its own ships."

Stressing these figures he continued: "If the United States expects to hold its present participation of American shipping in its foreign trade, it must provide for a definite replacement program of ships to take the place of those that are rapidly becoming obsolete and the development of such a program and its commencement will not admit of further delay; and the average construction of at least 150,000 gross tons of shipping a year for foreign trade service is the very minimum that will meet the requirement."

DELAYED WEDDING IS PLANNED BY PAIR

MACON, Ga., Nov. 2.—(P)—There'll be an English-German wedding in the Little Church Around the Corner soon that's been delayed a decade.

In 1924 Mrs. J. Marshall Johnston, of Macon, brought Ida Bell, daughter of an English clergyman, to the United States with her as companion. She worked for Mrs. Johnston at the latter's eastern home at South Hampton, Long Island.

There she met Herman Willigen, a German youth and an interior decorator. It was love at first sight but Miss Bell wanted to keep her job and kept putting off her persistent suitor, but he never gave up hope.

A few days ago Mrs. Johnston died at Atlantic City and left her companion $15,000.

Late today Miss Bell boarded a train for New York city in company with Mrs. DeLano Kohn, of New York, a daughter of Mrs. Johnston, to meet the German decorator.

Miss Bell said they would be married at the Little Church Around the Corner within the next two weeks. She said they have already selected their home at 2220 West Forty-third street.

Miss Bell's life of being a companion to the wealthy is over, she said, but her real companionship is soon to begin.

GEORGIA SEEKS MAN HELD IN BALTIMORE

BALTIMORE, Nov. 2.—(P)—Geoff Cochran, 24, was held today at the internal revenue headquarters at Fort McHenry for a hearing on a federal government charge of shooting a revenue agent in Georgia last August 10.

Cochran was taken into custody yesterday by police who visited a local address on information received from the southern state. Pending his hearing before United States Commissioner J. Frank Squire, reports for his removal to Georgia were being sent here.

Government officers said Cochran is the man who shot and seriously wounded Officer Frank Clarke in Ellijay, Gilmer county, Georgia, when the agent approached his machine while searching for a car loaded with allegedly untaxed liquor.

Court at Quitman

QUITMAN, Ga., Nov. 2.—Superior court will convene here next Monday morning with Judge W. E. Thomas on the bench. This will be the first term of court here with the recently appointed solicitor-general, George Lilly, of Quitman, who succeeded G. C. Spurlin, who died. Two murder trials are set for the first week along with numerous felon cases.

Frak Corn.

QUITMAN, Ga., Nov. 2.—A colored man on the B. B. Oliff farm brought in a harvest frak in the shape of a cluster of one dozen well-developed ears of corn in one shock. They were small ears clustered around a medium-sized central ear and all except one were well covered with grains. The farmer said this was symbolic of the big corn crop in the county this year.

The farmers have an unusually large crop of corn, hay and other feedstuffs.

Naval Stores Men Pleased.

VALDOSTA, Ga., Nov. 2.—Much interest is shown here by naval products in the announcement of the naval stores control board that the provisions of the agreement are to be rigidly enforced.

According to an announcement, under the provisions of the marketing agreement, the sale of gum rosin or gum turpentine from living trees less than nine inches breast high is prohibited. The restriction, it is stated, will be vigorously enforced by the control committee with the assistance of the United States forest service.

Winder Club Starts Fund.

WINDER, Ga., Nov. 2.—The Kiwanis Club in Winder has a fund for underprivileged children, raised last night when Dr. W. L. Mathews auctioned off the prizes won by him in recent contests. Members of the club believe the $65 contributed in this manner will give a good start to the fund, which in time may be large enough to put some child through school.

VALDOSTA, Ga., Nov. 2.—Rev. J. W. Hinch, presiding elder of the Valdosta district of the South Georgia Methodist conference, presided over the fourth quarterly conference of the first Methodist church tonight, the meeting being featured by annual reports from the pastor and all departments of the church activities.

The church will close its work for the present year by the 15th of November, in readiness for the annual South Georgia conference which convenes in Macon that week.

Drouth Hits Thomastville.

THOMASTVILLE, Ga., Nov. 2.—This section of south Georgia is suffering because of a lack of rainfall. The Ochlocknee river, five miles from Thomastville, is barely a trickling stream, branches are dried up, creeks are hardly flowing and springs which went dry with the drouth of last year have never yet renewed their activity, while wells on many farms are just dry holes in the ground.

Fields and pastures that were a verdant green a short while ago are now dry as parchment and it is feared that unless rains fall soon there will be a repetition of the widespread woods burning of last year with resultant heavy losses to owners of timber, livestock and to the wild life. The great pine forests which surround Thomastville, one-fourth of the original growth long-leaf yellow pine timber in Georgia, it is stated, being in this county.

Meanwhile range cattle and livestock are suffering for water and farmers are being forced to haul water many miles in numbers of instances.

MAIDEN SEEKS TO BAR ATTENTIONS OF SUITOR

MACON, Ga., Nov. 2.—(P)—The pieces of a broken friendship jangled in Bibb superior court today with a girl demanding an injunction to fend off the attentions of a suitor and the suitor denying his attentions were unwelcome.

Following a charge by the girl that the young man behaved objectionably because she had engagements with others and persisted in attempts to see her after she had informed him his attentions were no longer desired, Judge Louis L. Brown granted a temporary order restraining him from further communicating with her.

Today the young man filed answer declaring the girl took the action against him "in a spirit of revenge."

That she had "largely been the moving spirit and at all times more than agreeable" in their meetings and that the charges of threats and misdeeds she made against him were all untrue, "a fact well known to the plaintiff."

Judge Brown will hear the rest of the story tomorrow before taking action as to whether to make the injunction permanent.

NEWNAH, Ga., Nov. 2.—Farmers and county agents in northwest Georgia gathered here Wednesday and witnessed the terracing project in effect in Coweta county. Farmers in Coweta county saw the need for erosion control and requested two large tractors and terracing graders, promising to pay all expenses of operation. Already more land is signed than can be terraced this season.

The plan is proving so successful that other counties have become interested and farmers from these counties will be given an opportunity to visit many of the terraced farms and see the terracing machine at work.

The demonstration was under the direction of H. V. Davis, county agent.

36,423 Drouth Cattle In Georgia to Date

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Up to October 25 the state of Georgia had disposed of 36,423 head of drouth cattle shipped there by the federal surplus relief corporation. Administrator Harry L. Hopkins announced here today. Total receipts of cattle amounted to 104,485 of which number 68,062 were on hand in late October.

In a program to conserve food the 36,423 head of cattle have been converted into fresh beef and canned beef under the supervision of the state emergency relief administration.

Administrator Hopkins said that the movement of cattle from the drouth states had slowed up materially and that an effort is now being made to speed up the processing of cattle which were shipped to Georgia where good pasture was available.

Fay Webb Again Seeks Accounting by Ruby

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—(P)—Fay Webb Valle renewed her plea today for a court order authorizing her to question her husband, Rudy Valle, about his finances.

In her appeal from an adverse supreme court ruling she said she wanted to ask him whether, as she charges, he told her he did not have sufficient money to pay his 1932 income tax and "had to borrow thousands of dollars from his attorney, Hyman Bushel."

This, she said, despite Valle's affidavit saying: "Plaintiff places my worth at over $300,000 and states that my annual income is in excess of $300,000 a year. Both of these statements are exaggerated. I consider it unnecessary to go beyond the statement that I never denied and do not now deny that my income is very substantial and that my means are ample. They had to be in order for me to supply plaintiff with what she required."

Mrs. Valle has signed an agreement under which she is being paid $100 a week. She declared her husband threatened to pay her much less if she refused to accept that amount.

Tinsley this morning admitted he shot Harris but claimed the negro tried to poison him.

1 Ex-Wife Remembers, 2 Forget As Rites Are Held for Tellegen

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Nov. 2.—(P)—Only a few persons gathered today in the little chapel where funeral services were held for Lou Tellegen, a former great of the stage and screen.

Only one of the numerous women who loved Tellegen in his bright, romantic years—Countess Isabel Daneskiold, who as Isabel Craven became his third wife—paid respects at the flower-bedecked coffin.

Of the famous names of the theatrical profession in which Tellegen for so many years was a gallant figure, only one was represented. Julian

Eltinge, female impersonator, came and wept.

There was a simple wreath of gardenias from Essa Casanova, Tellegen's fourth and last wife. She was in Leonia, N. J., but she directed that the funeral for Tellegen, who committed suicide by stabbing himself with scissors last Tuesday, be held here.

There were no flowers from Geraldine Farrar, grand opera star, nor from the Countess Jeanne De Brochere, Tellegen's former wife.

The body was cremated. Next Monday the ashes will be taken a short distance out over the Pacific. They will be cast into the sea, as Tellegen wished.

GRAND JURY URGES REFORMS

Sweeping reforms, affecting both existing conditions and matters of public policy, are urged in the presentments of the September-October grand jury.

Among the important changes recommended are the consolidation of the city and county school systems, the enactment of more stringent laws against communistic activities, and the repeal of the state prohibition law.

The presentments give high praise to the efficiency and economy with which the county schools are administered, but point out that the city system is "thoroughly managed by political intrigue and constant petty bickerings, and it is surprising that it has functioned as well as it has."

The advisability of the merger of the two systems will be investigated by the better government commission, created last summer by vote of three successive grand juries. Even should the merger not be consummated, this investigation by an impartial commission, composed of outstanding citizens of the city and county, should reveal the sources of trouble that have caused the years of wrangling in which the city schools have been involved.

The county system has functioned smoothly and has been subjected to no attacks, but the administration of the city schools has been in hot water almost continuously for many years. The public is disgusted, and will undoubtedly welcome the opportunity to be informed as to just what the trouble is.

The grand jury has rendered outstanding service in laying the way for such an investigation to be made.

The recommendation that the laws protecting the public from the destructive activities of radicals is in line with the position taken by Solicitor-General Boykin, who has insisted that the best way to fight such agitators is before, instead of after, they have committed acts dangerous to the community.

The laws controlling efforts to preach communistic doctrines should bear to an even greater extent on prevention than on the infliction of punishment after the commission of crimes against the welfare of the public. To a greater extent perhaps than with any other threat to the public, communism has won its greatest victory when it gains its first foothold. Accordingly those charged with the preservation of the peace should have the backing of laws that will enable them to keep out of the state those who would undermine our principles of government.

In urging the repeal of the bone-dry law, the grand jury joins with many other juries, representing both city and county counties in Georgia, that have taken the same position. More liquor is being sold in Georgia every day than ever before in the history of the state, and neither state nor local governments are being benefited by a share of the huge revenues being taken in by bootleggers.

Atlanta would especially profit from repeal. The local bootleggers are steadily becoming bolder and the city has within the past few months seen the appearance of hijacking and other methods resorted to by the gangsters of large eastern and western cities during the period of national prohibition.

The recommendations of the grand jury as a whole outline a progressive and badly-needed program of reforms. It is to be hoped that, through the instrumentality of the Better Government Commission, the public will be made fully aware of the importance of the reforms recommended to every resident of the city and county, and the success of the fine program be thus assured.

DILLINGER'S GHOST WALKS

The ghost of John Dillinger is still stalking in Indiana, the latest repercussions from his career of crime and sensational escapes centering around the arrest of a group of citizens in Lake county.

The latest move is an outgrowth of heated controversies waging between democratic and republican forces in both local and state contests. Republican critics of democratic officeholders claim that Dillinger's escape was due not only to carelessness but to bribery.

An assistant attorney-general has rounded up eight residents of the county, supposedly as witnesses against those he claims are responsible for Dillinger's escape, via the "wooden pistol" route. Counteraction was immediately taken by his superior, the attorney-general of the county, who asked the grand jury to investigate his assistant's activities.

The arrests, it is indicated, were made in the endeavor to establish the existence of an elaborate conspiracy by which Dillinger was furnished with complete diagrams of the jail and surrounding buildings, was given arms and his successful escape to Chicago assured.

It is possible that bribery may have played a part in the flight from the "model" Indiana jail by the man who was then listed as America's public enemy No. 1, but the effort by republican leaders to prove the existence of a plot involving a number of democratic leaders and officeholders, results, in all probability, more from politics than from concrete evidence.

Few states take their politics more seriously than Indiana, and it is likely that the present temper in a teapot will blow over with the passing of the election.

MORE STREAM-LINE TRAINS

Announcement that plans are already under way by several of the larger American railroad systems for the installation of high-speed passenger trains similar to the one that recently broke the transcontinental time record reveals the degree to which the railroad officials of the country have awakened from the apathy largely responsible for the slump in rail affairs during recent years.

The railroad pioneers of America were men of vision and determination, and under their leadership American rail transportation became the peer of that in any country in the world. When these sturdy figures of the early days passed away, there ensued a half century during which American railroads were seemingly content to let well enough alone.

The speed of the average passenger train increased none during this period, despite the fact that the world was becoming constantly more speed-conscious, not only in transportation but in every other line of endeavor. Little was done to make rail travel more comfortable, and dust and heat, or cold, continued to make life miserable for the traveler, even in the finest trains.

It is not surprising that competing methods of transportation by water, air and highway made serious inroads into the business of the railroads. Steamships were made faster and bigger, huge motor buses furnished cheaper transportation, and air liners cut traveling time in half. At last the railroads have awakened to the fact that to regain their lost patronage they must reduce their rates, add to the comfort of their cars and speed up their trains. All of these things can be secured through the adoption of stream-lined, air-conditioned trains, and the announcement that the railroads in every section of the country are adding this type of equipment foretells a new and prosperous era in rail transportation in the United States.

Some walk to reduce, while others are reduced to walking, observes the Cedarstown Standard. Well, anyway, they are on their feet again.

The Dalton Citizen says the Arabs always go into battle with two poets in the first line. That's the only advantage of war we have ever seen recorded.

Church platters are not yet taken as indications of business conditions, says the Dalton News. But many people are caught at church empty-handed.

When the legislature convenes, Georgia's bone-dry law will be a bone of contention.

A Bear Story From Norway.

Bears are still plentiful in Norwegian woods. A farmer inspecting a forest near Kongberg this week met a big she-bear and three small cubs. When the bear saw the man she rose on her hind feet and advanced to crush him. Three yards from the man she stopped. The man, who was unarmed, remembered that a bear never advances toward any form of fire. So he pulled out his pipe and matches and lit match after match. Putting each of the matches to his pipe he puffed out as much smoke as he could make. The bear opened her mouth in apparent dislike, but still kept her position. The little cubs, however, could not stand the tobacco smoke. They began to retreat and the mother followed, leaving the man unhurt, but rather shaken after his experience.

There is a moral in this story and it is this: Always have your pipe with you.

Gandhi Retires.

Mr. Gandhi has announced his decision to retire from active participation in the work of the All-India Congress. The immediate result has been an increase in violence and the advocacy of violence all over India. Mr. Gandhi's reasons for retiring are not known, but there are strong hints in several British papers that he is growing weary of the struggle and that some doubt has crept into his mind as to the readiness of the people of India to achieve their freedom by passive resistance and non-cooperation.

If this is so, it means a tremendous encouragement to those Indian patriots and nationalists who see no other way but uprisings and revolts as a means to reach complete independence. On the other hand, it is a good bit easier to lead a rebellious tribes than it is with utterly peaceful people, who simply practice non-violence.

The Mussolini Forum.

Plans for the building of a huge palace of the fascist revolution are now far enough advanced to begin a discussion of the style and site of the new building. For years the municipality of Rome has been clearing slums and in this way has laid bare the ancient imperial highway. On this highway the fascist palace is to be erected. It is to be a mirror of the Mussolini epoch, awe-inspiring and wonderful. For many years the Mussolini himself has a passionate love for ancient Rome and a reverence for classical architecture which will cause him to build the new fascist palace in the drawing up of designs are to follow in the tradition of Rome and in no way let their design jar with classical surroundings.

The difficulties are great, for the new building must not rise above the Basilica of Constantine, and the Colosseum is to remain visible from the Venetian square. So far, 70 plans have been rejected. Ugo Ujetti, one of the leading architects of the Eternal City, suggests now that lightly built models of the four best plans accepted by the jury should be set up in the one after the other on the site. This will cost a lot of money, but even so, he argues, it is essential to be sure of what the public looks like in such an extremely important center of ancient Rome.

HEALTH TALKS

SENSITIVE TEETH AND DREAD OF THE DENTIST.

From now on I suppose I shall have to tone down by comments about dentists. Have you noticed lately how, already in planning some extensive alterations to be paid for with the money saved on dentist bills, that is, if I can work it right. Dentists or dentists, certainly people vary in their attitude toward a seance in the chair. I'm a middling good coward, always begin to holler before I'm hurt, but I don't think I'd mind much visiting my dentist or dentist, as the case may be, it is not for the pain of listening to his 1888 arguments in favor of brushing the teeth and trying to be polite, as befitts a guy in such a situation. So far as the song of the buzz and the slipping of the chisel and things and the unintentional lacerations of the gums are concerned, these have never tried my bovine soul enough to make me break into a cold sweat. But stronger men than I assume they suffer from real shock at the mere anticipation of the ordeal in the dental chair and they must have something to soothe their tortured nerves, or they will be utterly disabled for the rest of the day. These are the patients who demand an injection of local anesthetic before the dentist begins work.

In a review of records of some 7,000 cases in which physicians present a rational view of things and as a supplement in the treatment of various nutritional disorders, some interesting observations were made concerning the unexpected by-effects. In numerous instances the patients themselves reported that since they had taken the optimal vitamin ration dental treatment, for their teeth, no longer so hypersensitive to the dentist's instruments. In several instances such patients who had always insisted on the preliminary shot of local anesthetic found they now could weather an hour in the chair with little discomfort and no strain on their overexcitable nerves.

Just which of the vitamins may be chiefly or wholly responsible for that, I do not know, but I fancy Vitamin C has at least as much to do with it as has D.

Vitamin C, you poor ginks with sensitive teeth and bad gums will soon know, is present in fresh fruits and fresh green vegetables. It is destroyed by cooking. It is destroyed by prolonged moderate heating, but it is by short high heating—hence fresh meat is rich in Vitamin C (milk contains some if the cows get fresh pasture or green fodder) retains the vitamin better if brought to a boil for a minute or so, than if it is heated for a longer time. It is a powerful disease germ, that it does it.

Pasteurizing the vacuum process, universally used in canning factories, preserves Vitamin C, while home canning, more or less according to the process, destroys it. Canned tomato or tomato juice is nearly as rich in source of Vitamin C as is orange, lime or lemon or grapefruit or its juice.

We know some Vitamin C is advisable every day, but do not yet know definitely how much is essential (to prevent scurvy) and how much may be deemed the optimal daily ration to keep the body in the highest degree of health.

News Behind the News

By Paul Mallon.

BUILDING WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—A yawning silence was the only reaction to recent New Deal publicity feelers about a new $12,000,000 building program.

The idea was put out anonymously by certain of President Roosevelt's advisers who have long been suffering from the building fever, an apparently incurable political disease. The White House did not like it very much. The only comment there was that a lot of people had a lot of eight, ten and twelve-billion-dollar visions for projects which would be self-liquidating in 120 years, but that Mr. Roosevelt did not want to wait 120 years to get out of the depression.

You can accept that as fair notice that these building visions are going to have to be condensed to somewhat substantial realities before Mr. Roosevelt accepts any more of them.

There is a good reason for that feeling—the experience with the PWA.

FIGURES The New Deal press agents naturally assert the PWA was a great success. To all outward appearances, Mr. Ickes has allocated all his 3.7 billions and closed up shop. He has figures three yards long indicating that, if all the PWA man-hours were laid end to end, they would extend from here to the Aleutian Islands, or perhaps farther. The results, they say, are amazing. They are right about that.

You do not need more than two figures to see it. Mr. Ickes has allocated all his 3.7 billions, but only 1.1 billions had been disbursed by the treasury up to a few days ago.

In other words, more than a year after the whooped-up PWA campaign started, and now that it is all over, and everyone has gone home, the actual money spent is less than one-third of the total appropriation.

The last dollar of it probably will not be put into man-hours of labor until long after the depression is supposed to be over.

MOTIVES Most insiders are beginning to suspect that the public building theory of relief continues to survive largely for political reasons. The congressmen like it. They get $100,000 postoffices built in $10,000 towns. They get dams and reservoirs which flow with local prestige and votes for them. In fact, no politician can afford to be against the idea.

It is readily agreed at the top here that a conservative building program is essential, if only for the reason that the private building industry is dragging bottom. They justify the PWA on that ground, and other similar ones. But eight, ten and twelve billions more is something else again.

What they would like to see is a conservative, long-term government building policy—not an emergency relief measure, or a political pork barrel, but a systematized, planned, permanent and intelligent method of handling this phase of government activity.

FIGURES The PWA may dispute the figures cited here. Its books show it has written checks for $1,767,000,000, of which $1,507,000,000 is for federal projects. The monthly average disbursements, the officials say, are now running around $100,000,000.

They explain the discrepancy between 1.1 and 1.7 billions by saying the treasury counts the canceled checks, while they count checks mailed out. If that is correct, there are about half a billion dollars in checks (five months' disbursements) lying around uncashed.

But even if you accept the PWA's own figures, the conclusion cannot be altered. It means merely that they have been spending half their money instead of a third.

SPIES Even with all the pork offered, some congressmen are not satisfied privately with the cautious way the PWA has been administered. Some harsh things will be said about Mr. Ickes at the coming congressional session. The charge will be made that he has a graft phobia. It will be said that he never goes around a corner without first peering to see if a crook is there.

There is something in that, but not much. Exaggerated curbstone stories have been going around the inner circle about the espionage system Mr. Ickes maintains.

It is true he has a more extensive spy system than any government department (outside the D. J.) ever had before. His employees are reputed to sleep always with pillows in their mouths for fear of talking in their sleep.

But most of the stories you have been hearing about it are wrong.

GLAVIS SYSTEM There is no boy detective stuff in the system headed by Louis Glavis. The methods are those of trained newsmen rather than sleuths. His forces have been secretly divided into three divisions—interior, oil enforcement and PWA investigations. Agents assigned to PWA may also work on an interior investigation or oil.

As a rule, the PWA agents in charge are engineers. The work is not secret, but PWA agents, by young lawyers, engineers or newsmen. It is quite well known on the inside that they have government officials on special occasions. They even have carte blanche to investigate Ickes himself.

All cases, before being presented to grand juries, are first sent to Washington for an o. k. from the legal division and Glavis. They do not try any of the old prohibition undercover technique. They pay good salaries, $2,800 being the minimum.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

By Robert Quillen.

My Dear Louise: I am glad to hear that you and the boy friend "ditched it" and had a good time without hurt to anybody's feelings.

That is one of the great social problems of this new sex-equality era, and I'm afraid it never will be solved until you ladies solve it. All of us are sensitive about our weaknesses, and there is no more sensitive pride among men than that of a youth who must count his pennies.

Since the world honors wealth, it is the universal practice to hide poverty. And since males covet the respect of females, the younger who is hard-up has an additional reason to conceal the fact from his girl.

A rich boy might, without shame, buy his girl a hot dog for lunch; but the poor one, fearful of seeming cheap, will spend his week's wages to feed his lady in a swell restaurant. I know how it is, for I use it to do myself.

It may be silly, but masculine pride works that way and it can't be changed. The old way was unfair to girls.

It is bad enough when a girl must miss good times for want of a male escort, but it is the limit of nonsense when a boy wishes to escort a girl and the girl would gladly go and pay her own way, and the boy cannot ask her because he can't afford tickets for two and custom forbids him to let her pay for her own.

The sensible thing would be to ditch it. Why let a foolish custom knock the joy out of life?

But, alas! the boy is too proud (because of his poverty) to suggest it, and the girl is afraid to suggest it lest she offend him and seem too bold.

There is little you can do as an individual except trim your sails to match the wind. If the boy is sensitive, let him pay and suffer; if he is reasonable, pay your share and make no bones of it.

But all of you—the whole girl population—should unite to establish a new custom and quit suffering in dismal silence.

Love, DAD.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

No Politician, SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 2.—(AP)—I am not a politician; I talk too much.

Upton Sinclair said as he lay, stretching his frail length on the other twin bed, in a hotel which stood on ground once occupied by the San Francisco city hall. He was hiding out for a few hours rest on a sickly body, the heart of an ancient political skullduggery. On this spot, where the American Mahatma had holed up with his brainstrains, trust in a huddle and a snap at a water between campaign meetings, the taxpayers of San Francisco had been sold down the river "countable times in the years preceding the swamphole which he calls by the Bah-bibian name of Epic.

"I talk too much," the Mahatma reiterated, drawing a shrill-colored topcoat about his middle in the manner of Mahatma Gandhi, taking up the slack in his hip-chlo. "And," he added, "I write too much."

Telling Truth It is easy to agree with Mr. Sinclair. He had talked and written too much for a man who had to be people with his head in his hand to ask them to let him save them. Any man who over-undertakes to tell the people the truth about themselves should forewarn his neighbors of his hope of public office. Mr. Sinclair should know that the people, the chronic joiners, the men who march in parades wearing feather-duster hats, tripping over tin swords or the hems of nightshirts, will never forgive a man who derides their foolishness.

He ought to know that the people, for all their faults, are not stupid. They have a right to know the truth about the history of Stanford University and to receive the votes of the Stanford alumni who are now the influential element, seeded into the citizenship of California.

The American Mahatma has been a complaining witness against the world for many years. And now that he has a good case too. Now that he has been rash enough to carry the target in a campaign for governor of a corporation state, everything that he ever said or wrote, touching on the idiosyncrasies of the mult mind, is being fired back at him.

ANGERED INSULL

ADMITS MISTAKES

Says Ten-Million-Dollar Item Was Forgotten; Storms at Prosecutor.

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—(AP)—Caught up by the cross-examination he fought angrily all day, Samuel Insull admitted today a $10,000,000 mistake in a statement to stockholders of the Corporation Securities Company.

His defeat on this point came after he had parried questions from Prosecutor Leslie E. Salter for three hours, battling for his financial reputation against government charges of mail fraud.

The 74-year-old Chicagoan, while Prosecutor Salter asked him questions, had complained twice to Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson that he was "double-barreled."

Insull ordered Salter to answer but said he might explain.

Salter produced a financial statement which said the securities held by the Corporation Securities Company, under fire as a "hundred million dollar swindle," were carried at "$86,000,000, their purchase price."

"Did you mean to tell the public that securities in your portfolio cost the company $86,000,000?" Salter asked gently.

"I presume I thought I was making an absolutely correct statement," he began.

"Mistake of $10,000,000."

"I have never thought of it since," described Insull, "but I remember when I said that it was the purchase price, I probably was wrong there to the extent of about $10,000,000."

He denied that a write-up of stock, described by Insull employees earlier in the case, made the extent of his mistake really $31,000,000; denied knowing of the writeups, in spite of his familiarity with company statements.

Insull left the stand to return tomorrow. Immediately the second defense witness in the mail fraud case will be called.

Insull's defense team, which is signed to defend Insull financial practices.

Until confronted with the one statement, Insull had denied, denied and

LANSBURY HAILS NEW LABOR GAINS

Britain "Sick of Tory Rule," Leader Declares, as Results Pour In.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—(AP)—George Lansbury, labor leader, tonight said the party's sweeping gains in yesterday's national municipal elections "demonstrate that the nation is sick of Tory rule, both national and local."

In an address at Becontree he predicted that "the events of the past two days will prove only a forerunner of a tremendous victory for labor."

Other labor spokesmen, while reluctant to comment on the national significance of the elections, were openly exultant at what they termed the "amazing" victories in the London area and the striking gains registered in the provinces.

In the metropolitan area and the 100 largest provincial towns, in which complete returns had been received tonight, labor's net gain was 632 council seats.

Party chieftains declared the results showed Great Britain that labor has shaken off the effects of the defeat it suffered in 1931.

Complete returns from the metropolitan London area and the 100 largest provincial towns showed labor had gained 632 council seats. London voters accounted for 457 of this gain, with the remaining 195 in provincial cities.

Final London figures showed labor captured control of 11 boroughs and retained control of four it already held, thus holding 15 of the 28 comprising the metropolitan area.

California Sales Tax
12 Million in Quarter

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Nov. 2.—(AP)—California's sales tax poured a record-breaking revenue into the treasury during the September quarter, reaching $12,821,776.18, or $410,930.12 more than the state received in the previous record quarter of last June, the state board of equalization announced today.

Hampden To Offer Macbeth, Richelieu at the Erlanger

Walter Hampden, the noted actor, who appears this afternoon and tonight at the Erlanger, is shown above as he appears in Macbeth, which will be presented this afternoon.

Walter Hampden, the distinguished actor, will appear here this afternoon and tonight at the Erlanger in two of his most famous successes, Macbeth, which will be offered at 2:30 o'clock, and Richelieu, which will be offered at 8:30 o'clock.

Hampden is known to great credit for his characterization of great roles, his Shakespearean performances being among his best.

In his presentation of Macbeth this afternoon, the noted actor will follow the Shakespearean version, in so far as is possible, closer than any other American actor on the stage today. A number of his performances have been somewhat but Hampden follows the original author with but a few slight exceptions.

Richelieu to be offered tonight was written by Arthur Goodrich, the author of a number of other great plays. It deals with the life and time of the noted French cardinal whose influence was felt not only in France but throughout the world during the period of Louis XIII.

The performances this afternoon and tonight will inaugurate the legitimate stage season in Atlanta.

On the highest peaks of Georgia there occur isolated pairs of ravens. I cannot tell you what the taxonomic status of this bird is, although it has cost me a lot of grief this year. That is all past, however, and time may heal the breach that developed between myself and a prominent naturalist over the question of these ravens and scientific collecting. I hope it will.

Still ravens are not common in Georgia and I am gratified that the commissioner of game and fish, Mr. Cravey, has placed this species on the fully protected list for all time. We know that ravens occur here and we even have specimens for the relation ship problems. Therefore we need not disturb them any more, but can leave them free to breed on the wildest peaks they can find.

Earle Greene probably knows more about the Georgia ravens than anyone else. If he were available I would have him approve this article before publishing it. Since he is out of the state for a while, I must give you what little I know about them. My knowledge of the species was gained in the north woods.

The bird is about twice the size of a crow, and is just as black and shiny. He has a vocabulary of crows and cackles that the crow does not have. He is by nature wild, and for that reason the nesting sites are hard to discover. Dr. Wallace Rogers, Lucien Harris and Carter Walker, who are in service to Georgia ornithology when they photographed that nest last April.

They are carnivorous birds, the word "ghouls" having been used more than once in describing them. They are not averse to carrion, and for this reason they are to be valued highly. Seton has told of ravens attacking weak but still living animals. This I have never seen, nor am I anxious to, even though it would be a perfectly normal thing in the world of nature. Let me say that the poet's conception of nature is one that does not fit the facts. She is a stern old lady, and must be treated as such. Otherwise one's philosophy is certainly due for a shock on occasions.

There may be 10 ravens in the state of Georgia. Somehow I doubt it. Untreated her protection such as they now enjoy they might increase. Let us hope they will, for they are a species worthy of long and intensive study by competent ornithologists.

BLUE EAGLES REMOVED IN ATLANTA, RAY CITY

Removal of the Blue Eagle from the Studstill & Clements Lumber Company, of Ray City, Ga., for violation of the wage and hour clauses of the lumber and timber code, was ordered by the national N.R.A. compliance council at Washington in a telegram received Friday by W. L. Mitchell, of the Georgia state compliance board.

Acting on its own authority, the state compliance board also ordered the Blue Eagle of the Shoe Renery, Atlanta, to be removed. Repeated complaints by employees against the company for violation of the wage and hour provision of the code for the shoe rebuilding trade, and continued failure of the company to comply with the code led Mr. Mitchell to remove its Blue Eagle.

'RED' CASE TRANSFER OPPOSED BY BOYKIN

In an answer filed Friday to a petition for removal to the federal court of eight cases of negroes charged with circulating insurrectionary literature, Solicitor-General John A. Boykin denied charges that the defendants cannot obtain an impartial trial in Fulton superior court, that negroes are excluded from jury duty because of race and that the defendants' equal civil rights cannot be enforced in the state courts.

Boykin's answer on behalf of the state will be certified to the federal court when the petition filed for the negroes by John Geer, negro attorney, is passed upon.

A supplemental decision by the state supreme court on the Angelo Herndon case, which was rendered on a hearing for a motion for rehearing, is attached to Boykin's answer, rebuttal of attacks on the decision made in Geer's petition.

MAN STRUCK BY TRAIN
IN CRITICAL CONDITION

With one foot cut off and the other so badly mangled it may have to be amputated, Joe Henderson, 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Heatherly, of Brown's Mill road, was reported in a critical condition Friday at Grady hospital.

Heatherly was found lying beside the Southern Railway tracks at Roseland station, Lakewood Heights, early Friday morning. He told hospital attendants that he was injured when he jumped from a train. Physicians said that because of the nature of his injuries there was grave danger of serious infection.

NEW COTTON PLAN OFFERED BY JOHNSTON

AAA Pool Head Would Exempt 12,000,000 Bales From Tax in 1935.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 2.—(AP)—Mississippi farmers today awaited reaction of the department of agriculture to a plan that Oscar Johnston, the originator, believes would solve the problem of controlling cotton production.

Contents of the 10-point proposal were given in a copyrighted story published by the Commercial Appeal.

Mr. Johnston is manager of the agricultural adjustment administration's cotton option pool, but he told the Memphis newspaper that he was submitting his program to federal officials "as a private citizen and farmer."

He operates a large plantation at Scott, Miss.

Under his plan 12,000,000 bales of cotton in 1935 would be tax exempt and all restrictions for trading of exemption certificates would be removed.

A subsidy, the amount of which would be decided by the secretary of agriculture, would be given farmers as long as the market price is below pre-war parity. A proposed law would prohibit interstate shipment of cotton not grown in accordance with a program agreed upon by the secretary of agriculture and approved by two-thirds of the cotton producers.

Other phases of the 10-point law would call for the fixing of the 1935 voluntary reduction at 25 per cent; a pool of farmers on their attitude toward the Bankhead act, "preferably taken by the census bureau," an increase in parity payments from one to three cents a pound; an immediate campaign to enlist farmers in a voluntary reduction; prompt payment of all rentals; a transfer of processing taxes from raw cotton to manufactured articles, and "a supreme effort" by the department of agriculture to promote international relations that would permit more buying of cotton by foreign nations.

Speaker Defends New Deal At Political Science Session

Dr. Arthur Holcombe Challenges Henry Ford's Criticism of Politicians; E. Baskin Wright Speaks.

Dr. Arthur N. Holcombe, of Harvard University, speaking before the Southern Political Science Association Friday night, criticized the point of view "of those who say that what the politicians do makes very little difference to the public at large."

Dr. Holcombe's speech terminated the second day's program in the three-day meeting of the Southern Political Science Association at the Atlanta Biltmore.

Frank Prescott, University of Chattanooga, led the discussion Friday afternoon on the TVA. H. Reid Hunter, assistant superintendent of the Atlanta public schools, and Dr. Harvey W. Cox, president of Emory University, led the program on civic education.

Speaking on "The Experimental Attitude and the Governmental Art," Dr. Holcombe referred to Henry Ford's recent statement:

"My belief is that what goes on at the capital is of no great importance in any way or other. Laws do not save a country."

Challenging this statement, Dr. Holcombe said his respects to Henry Ford's genius in the field of industry, but asserted that Ford's "genius" appeared to desert him in the field of politics.

Pointing out the great importance to the people of the country of many of the policies which have been embodied in acts of congress, Dr. Holcombe defended the New Deal.

"On the whole, the New Deal is a sound example of the experimental method in politics, but the experimental method has definite limitations," he said.

The experiences with the New Deal experiments clearly show that the experimental attitude cannot be maintained for long period at a time. The public needs time to become accustomed to experiments.

"The most important ally of the experimenting politician is the school teacher, who must prepare the needs of the next generation for a different attitude than has prevailed in the past toward politics and business and the relations between them."

Negro's Rights Discussed.

E. Baskin Wright, president of the Southern Political Science Association, in speaking of "The Constitutional Rights of the Negro," said:

"This paper does not profess to be a defense of the southern side of the controversy. It is not an effort to accuse nor to offend."

Dr. Wright's speech concerned the amendments to the constitution which were designed to promote the civil, social, and political equality of the negro. These are the 13th, 14th and 15th amendments.

"This is designed to be a purely analytical discussion of the rights of the negro as guaranteed by the federal constitution and as interpreted by the supreme court of the United States," he said.

In connection with southern peonage laws, which came as a result of the 13th amendment, Dr. Wright cited Bailey v. Alabama and United States v. Reynolds in showing how historically the court has upheld federal statutes designed to prevent a condition of peonage.

"The literary test, proper qualifications, residents requirements, and poll taxes have all been upheld. This means that the southern states have effectively nullified the 15th amendment with the approval of the supreme court," he said.

H. Reid Hunter, assistant superintendent of the Atlanta public schools, presided in the discussion of "Needed Changes in Provisions for Civic Training." Speakers included Ralph Wager, Emory University; A. S. Sartain, State Teachers College, Alabama; E. Howe, University of Alabama; and G. H. Wells, president of S. C. W.

Dr. Harvey W. Cox, president of Emory University, presided over the second session. "The Present Status of Civic Training in the Public Schools" was the subject. M. D. Collins, state superintendent of schools; W. F. Bond, state superintendent of schools in Mississippi; and R. H. Hollingsworth, Georgia Southwest College, were discussion leaders.

Frank Prescott, University of Chattanooga, presided over discussion of the TVA. R. L. Howard, of the TVA, spoke on the social and economic aspects. Nick P. Mitchell, Duke University, spoke on the "TVA and Vested Rights."

Program Closes Today.

The three-day program will close at noon today following another "civic education conference," to which public school teachers of civics and the social sciences have been invited. Beginning at 9 o'clock this morning, speakers will discuss "Trends in Civic Training in the Public Schools" and "The Use of Newspapers and Periodicals in Teaching Public Affairs." Dr. Clyde L. King, secretary-treasurer of the American Political Science Association, will deliver the final address at 11:30 o'clock on "Education for Democracy."

Southern teachers of history and journalism are holding sessions simultaneously with the political scientists. All three groups will elect their new officers this morning.

Extension Rescinded On Rosin Agreement

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 2.—(AP)—The control committee for administration of the gum turpentine and rosin marketing agreement, announced today the department of agriculture had rescinded an extension of time for shipment of the 1934 production allotment.

Under the order, the board said it will be impossible to permit producers to ship their 1934 stock on the present quota after December 31.

The control committee recently extended the shipping limit to February 1, in view of the fact some processors to not complete their production until after December.

All tags issued to processors become nullified after January 1, the board stated.

The committee, in session here to fix allotments for next year, announced the processors will be given an opportunity shortly after the first of the year to exchange their 1934 tags for those of 1935.

Frank Prescott, University of Chattanooga, presided over discussion of the TVA. R. L. Howard, of the TVA, spoke on the social and economic aspects. Nick P. Mitchell, Duke University, spoke on the "TVA and Vested Rights."

THE DRINK THAT KEEPS YOU FEELING FIT FOR WHAT'S AHEAD

Anybody, like anything, encounters little stresses and strains. And every now and then something snaps. Most of the time there's no reason for either,—not when it's really easier to step into a soda fountain for an ice-cold Coca-Cola than it is to stop at a haberdasher's for a new pair of garters. The pause that refreshes stretches itself elastically into a real period of refreshment.

JACKET SQUAD IN GOOD SHAPE FOR TARHEELS

By Jimmy Jones.

Georgia Tech's salute to November finds the Jackets returning to the velvet turf of Grant field after a three-week absence this afternoon when they engage the North Carolina Tarheels of Silent Cat Snavely at 2 o'clock.

With crisp November weather prevailing and the fact that it is a sort of homecoming to the traveling Jackets, a crowd of at least 12,000 should be on hand for the battle, which projects the golden-shirted Tech Coach Bill Alexander into the last lap of the 1934 season.

The tilt with the Tarheels is a sort of key to Tech's success, so to speak, for a victory would prime the Jackets for games to follow with Auburn, Alabama, Florida and Georgia. In other words, they have a chance to duplicate their stirring finish of last season which found them taking the bit in their teeth and finishing in the proverbial blaze of glory.

REMEMBER 1933?

The Jackets of 1933, it will be recalled, also made a poor start, but stormed down the stretch, striking terror into the Red ranks of Alabama, the Red and Black squad of Georgia and then forcing to the grand climax of eliminating Wallace Wade's Duke team as a Rose Bowl possibility by defeating the Blue Devils, 6 to 0, in their final game.

Georgia Tech's chances against the Tarheels today are decidedly good, considerably bolstered by the Jackets' showing against Tulane last Saturday when they ran rampant at New Orleans to pile up a 39-0 victory. Their first downs against the undefeated Green Wave of Big Red Cox.

While Tech will be without the services of Lawrence Hays, the sophomore who came into his own in the Tulane game, Coach Alexander and his aids have groomed Marvin (Pug) Boyd, the former Tech halfback, to take the place of Hays in the role of reserve left halfback by way of replacing him.

MARTIN AT HALF.

"Sun Dial" Martin, the elusive South Carolina boy, who also flashed brilliantly against Tulane, will probably start at left half back, and then forcing to the grand climax of eliminating Wallace Wade's Duke team as a Rose Bowl possibility by defeating the Blue Devils, 6 to 0, in their final game.

Phillips was punting for the first time this season at New Orleans and his passing and running game also marked an apparent return to the form he displayed last year as a junior.

Excepting Hays, the Tech squad is in normally good shape. Billy Hill is reserve right half, and Martin has bruised fingers, but they are not serious.

Another back who should see considerable service today along with Hays is John McKinley, the spindly-legged but hard-running junior from Decatur High school. McKinley, like Hays and Hays, seems to be finding himself and probably will be used with more frequency during the November games.

A "CORKER."

Today's game should be a "corker," in the lingo of the game. North Carolina is the team that has been turned out at Chapel Hill since Chuck Collins' winning teams of 1928 and 1929. And the game today makes the Tarheels first visit here since 1931, when they played a 10-10 tie with the Jackets at Grant field.

Tech's success has been fairly lucky against the Tarheels, having defeated them last year, 10-6, and the year before, 45-14, when the Jackets put on a scoring jamboree.

Coach Snavely, former Bucknell coach, apparently has succeeded in injecting a little "iron" into the Tarheels this year with the result that the Tarheels first visit here since 1931, when they played a 10-10 tie with the Jackets at Grant field.

REAR BULLDOGS. The Tarheels have dropped a grenade into Georgia football early in the season when they came down to Athens and defeated Harry Mehre's Bulldogs, 14 to 0, and in the next game they have beaten Chet Wynne's Kentucky team, 6 to 0, and played a 7-7 tie with North Carolina State, a team they should have defeated and doubled the Tarheels' beaten but for an unfortunate case of injuries and sickness brought on through the experience of using a new kind of indele ink of the players' jerseys.

Carolina is said to be somewhat handicapped by the tentative loss of Charlie Shaffer, right halfback and star pass receiver and runner of the team. Coach Snavely, according to reports, has been alternating Eddie Martin, Harry Montgomery and Mac Bell at the position in case Shaffer does not play.

PLENTY OF BACKS. There is no need feeling sorry for the Tarheels, however, for they have a plenty of good backs. Dashiel, a sophomore, is said to be quite nifty, and the same is true of Hutchins, another sophomore. Don Jackson is a well passed.

The Tarheels also will present one of the staunchest lines that has shown on Grant field in some time. They have a great sophomore end in Buck two fine ends in Captain George Barclay, the all-American candidate, and Kahn, and a pair of hefty tackles in Tatum and Evin.

They likewise have a real paining attack which netted both touchdowns on Georgia.

Car No. 21 Off To See Georgia Beat Florida Today

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 2.—About the time the milkman begins to rattle the bottles outside your bedroom window in the morning, the telephone in Room 524 at the De Soto hotel will ring and the operator will say, in a sing-song voice, "It is 5:30, sir."

And it will be 5:30 o'clock on Saturday morning, which is 4:30 in Atlanta, and we will have to roll out of bed and shave and get down some coffee and climb into old No. 21 and start rolling for Jacksonville and the Georgia-Florida football game.

Car No. 21, which left Atlanta Thursday morning in The Constitution motorcade, completed the journey to the sea today, going to Savannah Beach and watching the tide roll in.

And tomorrow is the football game and Georgia's first chance at victory since the Furman game four weeks ago tomorrow. Since that time the Bulldogs have dropped three straight games but tomorrow in Jacksonville the man is going to bite the dog, so to speak. The Bulldogs are going to win.

This is not based on any astute football knowledge because man for man the Florida players are about as good as the Athens Bulldogs. The firm prediction that the Bulldogs will win is based on the old proverb which says that it is a long lane which has no turning and that the worm will turn and that all that goes up must come down, taxes excepted.

The Bulldogs were up in the air in the North Carolina and Alabama games and it is about time they landed. I think they will land on the Florida Gators.

At any rate old No. 21 is going to take us there to see it done. Our mechanical friend, old No. 21, is oiled and gassed and ready, waiting outside the tavern gates. If I miss on the Florida-Georgia prediction the losers may fire at will as we come home Sunday.

Use a scatter gun.

THERE WILL BE A CROWD.

There will be a crowd at this football game. Because Mr. Alex Cassells, who has been handling the tickets here, was all sold out by nightfall Thursday and word from Jacksonville was that temporary seats were being installed to see the game.

Most of the motorcades will fall in with Old 21 in the morning and go to Jacksonville for the game.

The Florida alumni of this section and the Georgia alumni, of whom there are more than a few, are all steamed up over the game.

It seems to be an annual party which affords one group the gloating privileges for the year. If the Georgia team wins, all the Georgia alumni in Savannah and this territory go around to the homes of their Florida friends and drink their drinks and gloat about the football game all year.

JIMMY PATTERSON IS HERE.

While having a small coffee royal this afternoon in the De Soto tavern who should walk in but Jimmy Patterson, one of the four guards of the 1929, 1930 and 1931 football team at Georgia.

Jimmy Patterson, a Savannah boy, saved quite a few games for Georgia. He looks as if he could step right in there tomorrow and get going. Patterson married in his senior year at Georgia, came to his home town and opened a health club in the De Soto hotel. He is doing well.

Harry Mehre, who is having trouble patching up two guards for play this year, had a lot of good ones in 1929 and the two following years. Jimmy Patterson, Red Leathers, Red Maddox and Tiger Bennett, the latter being line coach at Georgia this year.

THE HERMITAGE PLANTATION.

I wish very much to do a piece about the old Hermitage plantation which Mr. Oscar Strauss Jr. and I saw this afternoon but I can't get around to it. It was all too depressing.

The plantation is the one which David Wark Griffith used for the filming of that greatest of all moving pictures, "The Birth of a Nation." But there is a poignant melancholy about the place which remains with one.

The marble steps are there yet but the house is a shell. Negroes in the section about stripped the floors and most of the woodwork for kindling wood.

From the great tall porch one looks through the giant trees to the Savannah river, which was the road-way when the house was built in 1804. It was on this porch that Lillian Gish acted in the great epic picture. And it was in the old rooms, now floorless, that some of the interiors were shot.

There are ghosts about the grand old ruin, for Sherman executed two of his soldiers against the wall of the bakery and the bullet holes may be seen there.

I thought it most ironic they should have died almost beneath the slave block where slaves were sold. Slaves for whom they were fighting in the cause of freedom.

The ruins of the old slave cabins, made of brick, are there today. Once there were 52 of them. Today a half dozen are left standing. In ruins are the bakery, the hospital, the overseer's house and all the other buildings.

Today it is a hermitage for birds and bats and it stands as a monument, symbolizing the old, old life and culture and what has happened to it with the coming of good roads and machines and a new manner of thinking and living.

But one will stand there with tears in one's eyes looking at the ruins. Because there is a mighty sorrow in the air and the place seems solemn and quiet which is proper because more than one died there.

THE MOTORCADE ENDS.

An so the motorcade ends and we shall get down to the serious business of reporting football games and pushing hard on the throttle in order to get places.

The Constitution motorcade saw 516 cars sweep into Savannah. It was the greatest motorcade in history and the most remarkable thing about it was the manner in which people came to see it go by. Thousands of them had read The Constitution and came to see the cars go by.

At any rate, the way is open from Atlanta to the sea, and good old Car 21 helped celebrate the occasion.

INTERSECTIONAL CONTESTS HEAD SOUTHEASTERN

Tech, Auburn Face Southern Conference Teams. Vols, Vandy Up East.

By Garnett D. Horner.

Battles within the Southeastern conference Saturday expected merely to strengthen positions of the title race leaders as Dixie football fans look to a pair of inter-conference contests for the day's most heated combat.

Georgia Tech and North Carolina, both out of the unbeaten class but still possessing plenty of power, clash here at Atlanta, while Duke and Auburn tangle at Birmingham.

The North Carolina and Duke elevens, representatives of the parent Southern conference in these two engagements with Southeastern circuit teams, are favored to win on the basis of previous performances. Both Tech and Auburn have been developing rapidly, however, and are expected to put up stubborn battles.

Alabama Tulane and L. S. U., the only three "Big 13" elevens to have survived the first half of the season unbeaten, face opponents regarded as comparatively easy. A let-down by either of the three leaders might bring the season's most stunning upset.

TIDE VS. WILDCATS.

Alabama's Crimson Tide, whose machine-like performance in smashing Georgia last week has caused many observers to rank this mighty team as the best produced in the south for the past decade or more, encounters Kentucky at Lexington.

Tulane, deadlocked now with Alabama at the top of the conference standings at four victories each, is expected to maintain the pace with a victory over Mississippi at New Orleans.

L. S. U., in third position with two wins, should have little difficulty in turning back Mississippi State at Baton Rouge.

Georgia and Florida tangle at Jacksonville in a fourth game within the Southeastern circuit that has no bearing on the title. Georgia is a slight favorite.

INTERSECTIONAL BATTLES. Tennessee and Vanderbilt will give exhibitions of the "Big 13" brand of football to eastern fans, in national contests pitting Tennessee against Fordham at New York and Vanderbilt against Georgia Washington at Washington. Both Dixie teams may come home with victories.

Sewanee entertains Tennessee Poly. Three games are scheduled within the Southern conference, North Carolina State being favored over Clemson at Raleigh, Maryland over Virginia at College Park, and South Carolina over Clemson at Columbia. Washington and Lee should give the Navy a real fight at Annapolis and V. M. I. expects a win over William and Mary at Norfolk.

Rotary Teams To Play Today

The Rotary amateur football tournament is now going in full swing. Saturday's games will mark the peak of the contest with the Decatur Bulldogs, O'Keefe Panthers, Red Elephants and Northwest Yellow Jackets struggling to hold their perfect records. The youngsters are putting up a hard fight.

The Grant Park Jackets, reviving from a total defeat, came back to beat the Panthers last night and are expected to extend the East Lake Flashes today.

The teams are training hard. The fellows beginning to lose the spirit of the game and are playing well. The way the percentage stands at present, it is impossible to predict a possible winner of either league. These games are sponsored by the Rotary Club, enabling the youngsters of the city who would otherwise be unable to try their hand at real organized amateur football.

SCHEDULE FOR SATURDAY. 9 O'CLOCK GAMES. Blackhawk vs. Whitefoot Avenue Cubs (south field). Midget Trojans vs. Decatur Bantams (east field). O'Keefe Panthers vs. Hammerheads (west field).

10 O'CLOCK GAMES. Grant Park Jackets vs. East Lake Flashes (east field). Decatur Bulldogs vs. Grant Park Aces (south field). Northwest Yellow Jackets vs. Whitefoot Avenue Bears (west field).

9 O'CLOCK GAME. O'Keefe vs. Red Elephants.

CLARK, PAINE MEET TODAY

Clark University meets Paine College, of Augusta, at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the Clark athletic field. The Paine boys have been working hard all week in preparation of one of the strongest squads their opponents have ever seen. The visitors arrived here Friday with all of their men in excellent condition.

West End Stages Anniversary Shoot

The West End Gun Club will observe its first anniversary Sunday with an anniversary day shoot. Club officials have arranged an elaborate program and prizes for this shoot. First-place winners will get leather sport jackets in both scratch and handicap division. Other appropriate prizes will be awarded to place winners.

The past year has seen many improvements for the benefit of the sportsman at the West End club and officials are very enthusiastic over the outlook for the coming year. The West End club particularly stresses its plan of introducing new shooters to the sport. A large number of sportsmen have recently shot for their first time over the West End course. Every effort is made to encourage these shooters.

Jacobsen's shoot will begin at 9 a. m. and sportsmen are urged to get out and again become accustomed to the feel of their favorite field gun, as the game season is only a matter of a few weeks' time.

This Boy May Cause Tarheels Trouble

This galloping young man shown above is none other than "Pug" Boyd, former Tech High football star, who is expected to see much action this afternoon against the North Carolina Tarheels. Coach Alexander, of Tech, has groomed him for duty at right half. He will take Lawrence Hays' place in the Jacket lineup. Staff photo.

TWO HOUNDS TIE IN FIELD TRIALS

JACKSON, Ohio, Nov. 2.—(P)—A former champion and another hound were tied for first honors today as the forty-first annual all-age field trials of the National Fox Hunters' Association entered its second day. Big Coaster, owned by Winn Brothers, of Nashville, Tenn., the 1933 title winner, was all square with Red Pepper, owned by O. W. Mudd, of St. Louis. Each held 190 points to lead the field of 120 hounds.

The 1933 bench titlist, Fair Play, owned by Moses Hill, of Waco, Ky., was among the contestants. Bunched near the top of the rest of the field included Dora Casper, owned by Dr. M. Casper, Louisville, Ky., and Jane C. owned by Cleo Caldwell, Connersville, Ind., with 170 points; Kay Dee, owned by E. F. Bolton, of Coral Gables, Fla., and Old Hickory, owned by J. M. Branham, of Gallatin, Tenn., and Chicago, the association's president, each with 160 points.

DECATUR BEATS GAINESVILLE HIGH

With Grant, Pelot, Erwin and Thomas leading the way, Decatur defeated Gainesville High, 26 to 18, Friday afternoon at Decatur. The victory avenged a Gainesville defeat last year which eliminated Decatur from the N. G. I. C. championship race.

Gant's long run early in the game, Pelot's passing to Thomas and line backs were responsible for the Decatur victory. Decatur's second touchdown was a feature of the score. Pelot was rushed by three Gainesville players and after retreating some 25 yards he passed more than 50 yards to Thomas over the goal for the score.

Gainesville went back into the pioneer days of football for its scoring plays. The first score came after a Decatur kickoff, when a back caught the ball, threw a lateral to a mate who ran to the touchdown. Another was scored on line backs from the wide-open formation which reached almost across the field.

An offer reported to be $25,000 for Baer to meet Johnny Miller in a non-title bout was telegraphed to Hoffman by Dave Fidler, Des Moines. Hoffman said he would accept the offer. The date for the bout has been set tentatively for January.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 2.—All north Florida had its suits cases packed tonight ready to start early Saturday morning for Jacksonville and the Georgia-Florida game, which is to be played there Saturday afternoon.

A record crowd is to see the game which has all the elements of an old-fashioned even contest on the eve of the playing of it.

From Athens, Harry Mehre reported of the afternoon to this reporter that he was throwing a new backfield at Florida in an effort to break the string of defeats which has run to three.

The new set-up will include Maurice Green, the sensational sophomore whose kicking prevented a defeat in the Furman game, and whose booting in the Alabama game helped stave off a rout.

NEW BACKFIELD. He will be at the fullback position with Al Minot and Paul Causey, the latter a sophomore, at the halfback position and Charlie Treadway at quarterback.

Mehre said he was undecided when this quartet would be tossed at the Gators. He may start them, or he may not, he isn't sure.

The second backfield combination includes Cy Grant, the Cornelia star, who has been out with injuries practically all this season. He will be at halfback for the first time in a quarter. Johnny Bond, of Tecora, will be the other halfback, with Jack Griffith at quarter and Buck Chapman at fullback. Glen Johnson, Savannah boy, is in reserve at halfback.

This foursome will likely be in there when the first whistle blows. But Mehre expects to throw the burden on the first named. They will be counted on to win the football game.

CADE CONTINUES. Many of the 1,000 Atlanta people here with The Constitution motorcade will depart Saturday morning for Jacksonville and the game.

Dr. and Mrs. S. V. Sanford are among those here who will attend the game. Dr. Sanford is president of the university. There are many Georgia and Florida alumni in Savannah and they will join in the tour to the game.

Tickets to the game, on sale here in Savannah, were sold out Thursday, and reports are that the extra seats are being placed in the stadium there. Despite the fact that both teams are out of the race for the championship, interest is running high.

The game is one of natural rivalry, and this always makes for great crowds.

'GATORS HOPING. Reports from Florida were that the Gators would have their injured man back in the game Saturday, and they are expected to win. Man for man, they are equal to the Bulldogs, but Georgia's more recent strength in Florida always is at hand against the Bulldogs, and another defeat for Georgia is not improbable, although the odds favor the Athens elevens by about 6 to 5.

Bulldogs Take Final Workout.

ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 2.—With the team in better spirits than they have been in the past three weeks, Georgia today took a final workout in preparation for the Florida game here this afternoon as the university band and student body cheered from the stadium.

At 7 o'clock tonight 34 Bulldogs headed Pullman for Jacksonville. A large crowd of students and the band was on hand for the departure.

"We have everything to win and nothing to lose," said Coach Harry Mehre as the practice drill ended. The high school boys, the Tarheels, the Bulldogs will be Charlie Treadway, halfbacks, and Maurice Green, fullback. Causey and Green, both of whom are sophomores, have provided the punch necessary to while the backfield veterans were failing to click.

GREEN AND CAUSEY. Green's pick-up in running ability combined with his passing and tackling make him a dangerous man for the Gators to stop. The adept running of Paul Causey, who will be back on the soil of his native state, will also give Florida plenty of trouble.

It will probably be a daring game that Georgia will play at Jacksonville tomorrow since Charlie Treadway, the quarterback, is known for his take-chance attitude, and then the Georgia coaches plan to shoot the works in an effort to win.

Georgia's passing attack received a great deal of attention this week and the backs will probably be in the air with passes. Henry Wagon, veteran right end, who has been out for two days this week with a cold, will be in shape to enter the game running mate to Captain Charlie Turbyville, left end. Both ends are good pass receivers.

BOND, GRANT DOUBTFUL. John Bond, the Tecora typhoon, and Cy Grant, the Cornelia apple knocker, both of whom live within two mountains of each other in the hills of north Georgia, may not play in the game. Coach Mehre expressed the opinion that it was doubtful that they would play unless it was at a last resort. Both of the backs have injured shoulders. Grant being out since the North Carolina game three weeks ago.

Willies A. Law, and Dave "Butch" McCullough, guards, and Tom Perkins, reserve center, definitely will be out of the game. McCullough, an Atlanta boy, has a fractured arm, while

CRACKER HEADS TO ATTEND MEET

Director Hughes Spalding, of the Atlanta baseball club, accompanied by Business Manager Earl Mann and Eddie Moore, prospective manager, will represent the Crackers at the Southern league meeting to be held in Memphis Monday.

While no announcement has been made concerning the Crackers' 1935 setup, it is apparent now that Mann and Moore will remain in their present capacities.

Official announcement of this, as well as that dealing with the status of Spencer Abbott, ex-manager and acting president of the club at the close of the season, is expected to be made at a December directors' meeting of the club.

Meanwhile, a budget is being prepared for the 1935 player purchases and trades that are planned to be ready by the time the minor league meeting at Louisville on November 21 rolls around. The same group likely will represent the Crackers there.

MONROE BEATS GORDON, 6 TO 0

MONROE, Ga., Nov. 2.—Monroe defeated Gordon Institute, 6 to 0, here today in a battle featured by the great play of two lines.

The game was won in the first quarter on a 20-yard pass. It was fourth down, 7 to go, with the ball on the Gordon 20-yard stripe. Jones tossed to Mize, who stepped over the goal line unopposed.

Tech High scored before the game was five minutes old. The Atlanta boys took the ball on their 40-yard line and marched down the field like a well-trained army to allow Butler to slip across for the first touchdown. A short time later Schutte threw a pass to Corle that was good for 30 yards and Schutte followed it up by scoring. He also kicked the extra point.

In the second quarter Tucker intercepted a forward pass and ran 70 yards for a touchdown. The fighting Smithies, on a series of end runs and line plays, tallied again in the early part of the third. Tucker carried it over. Harrison intercepted a pass a few minutes later and ran half the distance of the field to score again.

Tucker made a touchdown in the fourth quarter and near the end of the game Eden went across Columbus' goal line for another touchdown with Allen kicking the extra point.

Tech High outplayed Columbus in the first half, but the visitors won 26 first downs and Columbus 5. Tech completed the only three passes it tried while Columbus made four and failed on 18.

Friendly Counsel By CAROLINE CHATFIELD

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column by Carolyn Chatfield. Write Miss Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

There is one word in the English language that has no unpleasant association for anybody. It is a little word that is on every tongue from the earliest babbling of the infant to the last word that the dying breathe. It is more frequently on the lips of young people than any other word. Some times it is used by husbands and wives. Poets write poems about it. It serves as theme for countless novels.

It has a thousand aspects, not one of them but is pleasurable. It makes the selfish forget themselves, the stingy generous, the proud humble, the envious loving, the miserly spend out a gleam. It gives a sparkle to the eye, sweetness to the smile. It electrifies romance, dignifies marriage, sanctifies

Several hundred colorful coats-of-arms will be shown at Rhodes Memorial Hall Sunday afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock, when Miss Ruth Blair, state historian, entertains the general public at open house. Particular significance is attached to these emblems at this time, since the Daughters of the American Colonists, of which Mrs. James A. Wood is state president, is sponsoring the building of a state-owned collection for the department of archives. Many of the insignia have been loaned for the afternoon and the exhibit will include the coats of arms of many of the prominent families.

Among patrons of the afternoon are Mrs. James A. Wood with the Hunter, Barwell, Willingham, Roberts and Cox emblems; Mrs. Frank Mason with the Venable, Mason and Hoyt insignia; Mrs. Howard McCall with the Tidwell, McCall and Coates arms; Mrs. Charles E. Rice with the Rice, Collier and Isham families; Mrs. J. H. Nicholson with the Wingfield, Walton, Butler and Woodson families; Mrs. T. C. Whitner with the Whitner and Gray emblems; Mrs. J. D. Cromer with the Hillier and Early arms; Miss Ruth Peck with the Peck, Taliferro and Pharr insignia; and Mesdames George Hillier Jr., Denny Peet, H. C. Shover, J. W. Smith, William B. Dunn, Frank H. Morgan, Frances Brown Chase, W. C. Carpenter, Aurelia R. McMillan, John M. Slaton, Willie Martin Hurt, Wayne Wilson, George Breitenbacher, C. J. Haden, Shige Jones, Miss Mary Ella Yancey and others.

Costs of arms became hereditary about the close of the thirteenth century, but the use of emblems extends to the prehistoric era. The American Indians were found with totemic signs. The tribes of Israel had their insignia, that of the tribe of Judah being the lion, the Roman empire had its eagle and the city of Rome its wolf; Carthage had a horse's head and Athens an olive branch and owl. The globe surmounted by a cross signifying the power of the cross over the world, was presented Pope Benedict VIII in 1013 and became the emblem of imperial or royal power.

During the middle ages the arms of a knight were borne on his shield, repeated on his crest, painted on his banner and engraved on his tomb. A victorious knight had the privilege of assuming the arms of a vanquished enemy and the three feathers of the Prince of Wales, once the badge of the king of Bohemia, was won in the battle of Cressy when the king was slain.

The United States being a democratic country has no central office for controlling the granting and bearing of arms, such as is found in most European countries. England has had her Heraldic College since 1483, its business being to register grants of arms.

THE LAUGHING GIRL MYSTERY

By Viola Paradise

INSTALLMENT XXXII.

"Of all the rabbit-hearted spineless jellyfish, this Willie Verseter is it," Higgins told Alby. "So this is the boy they're going to fry for Cousin Daisy. I say to him, And he began to whimper. It wasn't me, it wasn't me, I never did it! So I says, 'If you talk fast and straight right now, maybe the state will save up a little of that electric juice for somebody else instead.' And he just gushed facts. Johnson wrote 'em down, and he signed them, and then settled in for a good cry. Here they are," Higgins drew several sheets of foolscap from his pocket.

Alby looked over the confession, which was signed not Victor Salter, but William Verseter, and nodded. "Bring him in and call Dinard," he said.

When Higgins brought William Verseter in, Alby asked Dinard, "Is this the man who knocked you out the other night?"

Sherry nodded, then said, "But why did you do it?"

Verseter made no reply. Sniveling, he turned his frightened eyes away. "You will understand presently," Alby said to Sheridan. "Higgins, detail some one to bring Willie in when I buzz. Dinard, you'd better stay out, too, till Willie has made his entrance. Your face would spoil my climax. I'll pull off the little drama in the outer room. Is that latest cable decoded?"

"Here is it, chief," said Harrod. "A letter and some pages of a diary."

There was no sound now except the crackle of the paper as Alby passed each page to Higgins and Harrod.

"What a beast," he murmured as he read Daisy's diary. "Poor girl," he said as he finished it. "It won't take a jury 10 minutes to bring in a verdict."

"Now for the fireworks," said Higgins, opening the door.

"Please take seats near me," said Alby to the waiting witnesses. The circle narrowed, and a tenseness seemed to vibrate in the air.

Mr. Alby began quietly, "We have been fortunate in solving the murder of the girl who died laughing. Some of you," he looked from the reporters to Mr. and Mrs. Coggs, "urged a quick arrest. But despite a wealth of obvious clues, we felt that first we must learn not only the identity of the murdered girl, but the motive for the crime. With the murderer's unconscious aid and the help of Scotland Yard, we have discovered both. The girl's name was Daisy Satterly. The motives were greed."

The tenseness in the room increased. "From the beginning," Alby continued, "we guessed that the murderer was connected with the museum. Daisy Satterly, also called Diantha Sheridan, was a distant cousin of Sheridan Dinard."

Adelaide's caught breath made a sharp sound. All eyes turned to her frightened eyes. Her face was dead white.

"The fact that a museum dagger had been used," Alby continued, "that a statuette belonging to the museum had figured in the case, that certain members of the museum staff knew the week-end habits of the occupants of the house on Twelfth street, all pointed one way. The police felt, however, that this was a two-man murder. The mysterious disappearance of Peter Marlin complicated the case. We now have reason to believe that Peter Marlin, too, has been done away with."

"I thought so all along," said Mr. Coggs, complacently.

"No one," said Alby, "was in a better position to know than you, Mr. Coggs—at right, Higgins."

Higgins stepped forward. "Andrew Coggs, alias Peter Marlin, I arrest you for the murder of Daisy Satterly."

Adelaide burst into a sob of relief. Coggs was on his feet, struggling not so much to free himself from the handcuffs Higgins had snapped on, as to find words.

"You're crazy!" he said at last. "I stated that this was a two-man murder," Alby said. He pressed a button on the desk before which he stood. "We shall now introduce the associate murderer."

Through the further door two policemen pushed the gringing young man with slant-set eyes and hair growing above the knuckles of his knobby hands.

Mrs. Coggs screamed. "He never did it! I tell you he never even saw the girl! He was with me every minute of the time—"

"Shut up, mamma!" thundered Mr. Coggs.

"I won't shut up. I never wanted him in on it. That was your idea. And he wasn't in on it. Willie, don't you be afraid!"

"I must warn you, Mrs. Coggs," said Alby, "that anything you say will be used against you. You, too, are under arrest, as an accomplice."

"He's down at Quapattuck every minute!" Adelaide cried.

"Don't be a fool, mamma!" said Mr. Coggs. "It's all a mistake. As for this young man, I've not an idea who he is."

"Let me introduce your son," said Higgins. "William Vail, alias Victor Salter, alias Willie Verseter. He's signed a confession."

William shrank before his father's venomous look.

"You rat!" Mr. Coggs spat out the words.

William whimpered. But Mrs. Coggs shrieked. "He's a good boy—don't you be afraid, Willie!" She turned fiercely upon her husband. "He never did anything but what you made him do! And he never even saw Daisy Satterly, alive or dead! You did it all!" And then to Alby, "He did it all, everything, do you hear? He killed Daisy, and he tried to kill Miss Sayre. He just couldn't wait, the stupid fool, till you arrested Dinard. Afraid they'd get married or have a baby. So he went up on the roof, and got Dinard's bedroom slippers with his window opener, and planted the footprints, and didn't even know she wasn't in bed! He even stole their marriage license. Yes, and he'd have killed me, too, as soon as we got the money, and have married his Susie Brown, his landlady's daughter that he had his picture taken with! So he couldn't marry her as long as his wife was alive! My eye! He did everything. You'll find Daisy's suitcase in one of them automatic files in the Pennsylvania station. And his make-up box in another, and the museum keys! I tell you!" she screamed. "Willie never did a thing! Willie was with me every second in Quapattuck, do you hear?"

"All right, boys. Take them away," said Alby quietly.

"Look!" exclaimed Joey. "He's for-

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

A LITTLE SATURDAY TALK.

Wilson L. Gill, known as the "Father of the School Republic," has asked me to tell Corner readers some facts about his plan of helping boys and girls to be good citizens.

The first School Republic was started in New York city in 1897. Since that time it has been put into operation in hundreds of schools in the United States, Canada, England, Germany, Austria, Finland, New Zealand and Argentina. This does not mean that every school in those countries has had it; but it has been adopted in a great number of cities. Thousands of boys and girls have found it interesting, and many teachers and principals declare that it is a fine method of training young citizens.

Mr. Gill says that the only way a child can learn to be a good citizen is by practice; and he devised the School Republic for this purpose.

When pupils in a school want to form a School Republic, they ask their teachers and the principal for permission. If it is granted, all the pupils gather in school assembly, and elect a president or premier. He names a chief justice, a secretary of state, and other officers. The pupils vote to confirm the officers he appoints.

The form of government is made as nearly as possible like that of the country in which the school is located.

Each room of the school is formed into a "city." A mayor is elected, and he appoints traffic officers, a judge, a "blackboard commissioner," and other officers. All the pupils in the room make up the city council. As nearly as possible, each pupil is given a special duty to perform.

That, in a very short form, is the outline of the School Republic plan. Boys and girls have told how it made them feel like "true citizens," and have said that they believed it had done their schools a great deal of good.

At a later time I am planning to prepare a leaflet telling how to start a school republic. It is not ready just yet, but it probably will be finished within a few weeks.

Henderson H. Gamble and Joe W. Walker, under a joint indictment for the interstate transportation of stolen automobiles, were sentenced in federal court Friday by Judge E. Marvin Underwood to a year and a day each, the sentences to run concurrently with sentences now being served in the federal penitentiary for a previous offense of the same kind.

J. W. Cole, chief postal inspector of the Atlanta division, stated Friday that he had received a wire from the postmaster at Green Sea, S. C., saying that the postoffice there was burglarized Thursday night. A safe was blown open and rifled, but as yet the authorities have been unable to determine the amount of the loss.

Police announced Friday that they had arrested seven negroes, five men and two women, in a raid on a house on Carter street, Decatur. Lottery equipment was found and charges filed against the group.

Police Friday were searching for burglars who carried off the "cats" for a banquet which was scheduled for Friday night. Mrs. S. Shelton, 541 Bankhead avenue, reported that while she was absent from her home the burglars broke in and stole a quantity of foodstuffs which she had obtained for a dinner Friday night. Mrs. Shelton said the thieves missed three dressed hens and that she replaced the stolen food and the dinner went on in spite of the loss.

Mrs. M. E. Phindol, 363 Parkway drive, reported to the police Friday that while she was absent from her apartment on a brief visit to a neighbor's home, thieves entered her residence and stole $55 in cash.

General J. L. Driver, past commander, Georgia division, United Confederate Veterans, has returned to the city after an extended visit to relatives in Cleveland and other parts of northern Ohio.

Comptroller General William B. Harrison, ex-officio insurance commissioner for the state, has been named to head a special commission which will recodify the state's insurance laws.

12,000 Finns Held By Soviets, Charge

HELSINKI, Finland, Nov. 2. (AP)—A Finnish workman has returned to Helsinki to tell the story of 12,000 Finns he says were held by the Soviet Union.

The workman—named Valkana and about 40 years old—graphically described suffering and privation he asserted he and his fellow exiles underwent in the "land of perpetual fog." He declared the victims were Finns who ventured across the border into neighboring Russian provinces out of curiosity—only to be seized when they tried to return to Finland.

Valkana insisted that the exiles included hundreds of women and children who were forced to live in crude military barracks with only pine splinters for lights.

'New Deal' Spirit To Overcome Problems, Says David Owens in Address to Merchants

Seen at the Atlanta Retail Merchants' Association dinner Friday night at the Capital City Club were Frank Neely, of M. Rich, Inc., (left), David Owens, of Charlotte, N. C., president of the National Retail Dry Goods Association (center), and T. C. Dickson, president of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' Association. Mr. Owens spoke to the gathering of Atlanta and visiting businessmen on "The Retailer in the New National Picture."

But we are pioneers if we do not realize it, and the pioneer spirit will overcome our problems."

As some of the corrections which are needed, Mr. Owens mentioned governmental extravagance and governmental competition with business in production.

The codes of the NRA were not written directly for business, but for a human need—the need of fifteen million jobless people."

Mr. Owens was optimistic in his views on the outcome of the great national problem. He said that he believed that the pioneer spirit of the American people had not frozen in their veins, and that it was this spirit that would pull the nation through.

"The Blue Eagle may not continue to fly, but the good old Stars and Stripes will," he declared. "It is inconceivable to think that this country cannot govern itself. A lot of corrections are needed, it is true."

Mr. Owens said that Congress probably would be forced to pass a bill calling for a basic law to control wages and hours, to be administered by a committee sympathetic with labor.

After the expiration of NRA—what then?" asked Mr. Owens. He answered this question with "Probably more NRA. I believe that President Roosevelt is scheduled for another term in office. The power which allowed him to establish the present NRA will permit him to continue it."

Mr. Owens told of a conversation in Washington with Donald Nelson, member of the national industrial advisory board, in which Mr. Nelson declared, "we cannot go back from NRA."

If you don't think we have improved," Mr. Owens concluded, "look at the records of some 80 years ago, with lower relative wages and a working day from 6 o'clock in the morning to 9 o'clock at night."

The meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association called together some of the leading businessmen of the city, including Frank Neely, who introduced the speaker; Colonel F. J. Paxon, father of the association; and Mr. Mitchell, head of the state commission of Georgia.

T. C. Dickson, president of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' Association, presided. Some 200 Atlanta and visiting merchants were present at the dinner.

Unless an unusual amount of taxes is collected this morning, the last-half October city pay roll will not be met Monday, Acting Comptroller Lawrence A. James announced Friday.

The city pay roll for the last half of October, due Monday, totals almost $300,000, and the city has only $130,000 in the treasury. Some $28,000 worth of checks already have been drawn and the city now needs approximately $136,000 to pay off.

However, officials are attempting to raise the needed cash, and it is probable that the pay roll will be only a day or so late next week.

R. A. McMurtry, tax collector, said today about $35,000 a day to run the city of Atlanta, but Friday only $28,000 was paid into the treasury.

SUCCESS IS INDICATED FOR HOUSING CAMPAIGN

Many Pledges Being Made, C. of C. Reports; 'Little House Open to Public.'

Success for the $3,000,000 Better Housing drive, being conducted in Atlanta this week by the Chamber of Commerce, is indicated in the reports of pledges being made to the chamber, it was stated Friday.

According to reports made by workers from all sections of the city, great interest is being manifested and officials are confident that the $3,000,000 goal will be attained. A study of building permits from 1919 through 1933 gave impetus to the launching of a better housing campaign, according to W. W. Winter, general chairman of the campaign.

The report showed that in 1930 permits were obtained totaling $8,925,000. In 1931 they dropped off to $3,402,110, and still further in 1932 to $1,898,465. Last year the permits failed to reach the million-dollar mark with a total of $854,535, less than the normal monthly total.

This indicated the need of a better housing campaign, according to Mr. Winter, and the Chamber of Commerce reached the decision to launch such a campaign, since the passage of the federal housing act by the last session of congress.

Atlanta's "Little House" now open for inspection at Peachtree street and Linden avenue, is an example of the renovating and repair work which can be done by the use of federal funds. The remodeled house is an attractive white cottage and will be kept open from 10 a. m. until 9 p. m. daily with Mrs. Hortense W. Ulmer in attendance to assist visitors.

Qualified architects are on duty there to advise Atlantans on proposed remodeling plans.

A large number of women's organizations have made applications for the permission to hold receptions in the remodeled house. The first to be granted this was the Women's Club through Mrs. Hinton Blackshear. This organization will hold open house next Wednesday at the "Little House" from 2 until 9 p. m.

The house was decorated through the co-operation of the furniture district in New Orleans, will inaugurate a series of special services at the Central Presbyterian church Sunday.

He formerly was pastor of the Central church, serving here for 10 years.

The Story of TABASCO

In 1852 a certain man by the name of Gleason (who had been with General Scott during the capture of Mexico City in 1847), came to New Orleans, and while there gave to E. McIlhenny the seeds of some peppers which grew in the state of Tabasco, Mexico. Mr. McIlhenny planted the seeds and found the quality of the peppers so good that he continued to grow them, for table use, on his plantation at Avery Island.

At the close of the War Between the States, like all southerners, the McIlhenny family had been financially ruined, and returned to their plantation home (from which they had been banished by federal troops), without funds to buy the things that help make food tasty.

Mr. McIlhenny began experimenting by making condiments from the plants that had survived during his absence. Among these were some pepper bushes that had grown from the seed Gleason had given him. With the pulp of these peppers as a base, Mr. McIlhenny made a hot aromatic sauce, which became so popular throughout the neighborhood that its reputation spread over the country until the largest wholesale grocery house in New York induced Mr. McIlhenny to pack the sauce for market. So that in 1868 Tabasco sauce was made available to the public.

Since that time Tabasco, through its high value as a piquant seasoning, has become world-wide in its distribution. If you have not yet discovered the magic of its flavor, by all means get a bottle tomorrow!
